To Give Money to the George Wash ington University.

We have nothing here and now of a new institution, to be known as the college of agriculture for that settion of the republic. If that is 10 to done, let the proposition be made, and advocated, and discussed and ventilated. ed on its own merits. It might, how-every, be a very difficult proposition to establish, but let that pass. This proposition is not of that sort; it is simply and only an effort, under cover, to get an appropriation of money for a private institution from the public treasury. That is what it means, and nothing else.

The iniquitous and un-American proposal is enough to make the bones of Dr. James M. King rattle in the freedom, for he devoted the best years of his life to a successful effort to show to the nation the dangerous effects of the policy in vogue in Washington, and at Albany, and eisewhere, whereby mil-lions or dollars in the aggregate wervoted out of the national and state treasuries for the support of private and sectarian schools. That polic, was supped, almost completely, by the prevenent which Dr. King more than any other one man, fathered, advo ated, argued fought for, and finely brought to its triumphant outcome.

Our aim in this editorial is not to urge the reasons why this bad bill, a weak the force congress and urged by one of the

Ireland's Oldest Stronghold. Malahide castle, on the seacoast, about ten miles north of Dublin, it is claimed, is the oldest inhabited stronghold in Ireland. A most picturesque old place, it has extensive encircling woods, which make it an ideal resiwoods, which make it an ideal residence in either winter or summer, while the little town of Malahide is similar to an English village adjoining a nobleman's well cared for estate. Malahide furnishes the unusually rare instance of a baronial estate having continued for nearly seven and one-half centuries in the heirs male of the ancestor on whom it had been originally conferred. Henry II gave the manor to Richard de Talbot in 1174, and his male descendants have resided at Malahide ever since, except for a brief period during Cromwell's time, when they were driven out for seven years. In the great half at Malahide is a suit of armor with a gash in the side suit of armor with a gash in the side about which a romantic story is told. The wearer of this armor had just been married in Malahide church when there married in Malahide church when there came a sudden call to arms, and although the bridegroom's side was successful he himself fell in the fray, His bride—"maid, wife and widow" in one day—soon, however, consoled herself, for she was married twice after that tragic day, the first time six months afterward. 'By her second husband she had a son, Thomas Talbot, whom Edward IV appointed lord admiral of Malahide and the seas adjoining, a hereditary honor borne by successive heads of the family down to the present Lord Talbot de Malahide. This lady's third husband was John Cornwalshe, chief baron to Henry VI, and, dying when over $6, she was buried
